Kenston Junior Baye Samba Fall of Senegal

International student profile: Baye Samba Fall of Senegal

Kenston is proud to have eight students studying from countries across the globe. Baye Samba Fall is living with host Jim Bob Crews of Blackstone.

What is your hometown? "I'm from the capital, Dakar, which has over a million people (the metropolitan area population is close to 2.5 million). My family moved to New York City last summer. I have one brother and one sister." Describe your school at home. "In the 9th grade, I started going to SEEDS Academy (a boarding school for intensive academics and basketball for about 2 dozen students). While there, my roommate was Kenston senior MBaye Thiam (aka "Papa"). There are 13 grades of school. How was basketball in Senegal different from playing basketball here? "The people I played against there were taller. For example, I'm 6' 8" and played against a 7-footer who was a year younger than me." What is your favorite food? "Back in Senegal, my favorite food was rice and fish. My favorite American food is pizza. What languages do you speak? My first language was Wolof. French is the language spoken/taught in school. Wolof is spoken outside of school between friends. I started learning English in middle school. What college would you like to attend? "I hope to play basketball in a Division I or Division II college in or close to Virginia." Name one way life is different here than at home. "There is more seasonal temperature change here. It is generally hot during the day year round in Senegal. I did not see snow in Senegal." What do you like most about Southside Virginia? "The pace here is much slower than New York City. Folks here take time to pay attention to you and to speak to you. New York was not that way for me."
